🏠 Pastor André: Busy Times!

Grace be yours and peace.

It's been a busy summer... one of the busiest in years!

Millennium Project

In May, the Millennium Project got under way with the major restoration work proceeding through July. The results are extremely satisfying. The church is beautiful! See page 5 for details.

ELCIC National Convention

In July, I was a delegate to the ELCIC's national convention. Highlights include:

- (1) the election of Bishop Raymond Schultz (BC Synod) as the ELCIC's third National Bishop and of Pastor Susan Johnson as our new Vice-President;
- (2) a celebration of the 25th anniversary of women's ordination—including the ordinations of Christine Selbstaedt, Marty Tuer, Judi Harris and Nadine Nicholds— in the ELCIC;
- (3) the historic approval of the Waterloo Declaration, a plan to embrace full communion with the Anglican Church of Canada. Full communion will mean that clergy from each church can serve in the other and congregations will be able to more-easily work together in common endeavours.

Millennium Parish Album

People have been signing up to be photographed for Trinity's Millennium Parish Album. Buck Roth has been rallying the community to great success! Photography begins this month.

Sunday School Preparation

Pastor Nadine has been pulling the leadership and teaching teams together for fall. Many teaching teams remain intact from last year. Wonderful! Some new teams have been born. Great! A new teen group will be meeting, come fall. Wow!

Lots going on around here! Come, be a part of it all!

Blessings... See you in church!

🏠 Millennium Parish Photo Album

At last count, over 260 families and individuals had signed-up to be photographed for Trinity's Millennium Parish Photo Album. What a terrific response! This will be our biggest and finest album to date! Buck Roth has done a terrific job overseeing the project. Photos will be taken in two stages beginning August 26 and again, beginning September 7. We're also collecting parish photos for possible inclusion at the front of the album. Photos should be clear, with lively action. Got something you'd like considered? Put identification on the back and drop it in to the office.

🏠 andré lavergne

🏠 Parish Listing Update

We have been working hard to bring our parish listing up to date. More families have moved or been reconfigured this summer than in any year we can recall! Please check your family listing in the narthex directory to make sure that we have correct spellings for names and accurate addresses and phone numbers. We also need the addresses for any young people who have left home and are now on their own. Revisions to the parish listing will be reflected in the Millennium Album.

🏠 Sad News: Melissa Racho Retires

A few days back, we learned that Melissa Racho, our sexton for many years, will be retiring from her position at the end of September. With support from husband Brian, Melissa has rung the church bells, provided for monitoring and security of the premises, opened and closed for church services and other events, and much more. We are grateful for Melissa –& Brian's!– many years of faithful service.

On September 30, we shall honour Melissa with a presentation and reception following the first service.

On August 22, Trinity's Council will consider how best to proceed in finding one or more people to take up the sexton's work. As always, suggestions and inquiries would be welcome. Speak to Rob Murray or Laurie Clarke if you have something to contribute. Details of Council's search will be forthcoming in the Sunday GUIDE TO WORSHIP.

Happy

A self-ish story:

Woke up the other morning feeling happy. Not happy about anything in particular: just plain happy, for no particular reason. It was true happiness, not contentment or peace or deep joy but a lightness of the spirit, like sparkling wine. I lay in bed for a long, long ten minutes or so, feeling the perfect weight of the covers and the soft, cool freshness of fan-driven morning air on my face. Oh, I was happy....

Okay, I know this doesn't sound like such a big deal, but when a person has spent serious amounts of time in whatever-you-want to call it—Interesting Times, or the Valley of the Shadow, or De Profundis Land—then waking up in a state of simple happiness is really quite a treat. When you've been in De Profundis Land for a long time, the state of being happy feels incredibly delicious, like the feeling you get when you take off tight shoes and soak your feet in cool water, stretching your toes luxuriously. Ahhhhhh... I lay there, examining and deeply enjoying my own happiness, and my enjoyment was the cherry on the whipped cream on the double-fudge-sauce Haagen Daz sundae, except that —Deo gratias!— happiness is not fattening.

I could, of course, have easily talked myself out of my happiness: I could have spent a few minutes ruminating on my own sins or (even more compelling) the sins that others have inflicted on me. There seems to be a general impression around these days that happiness is equivalent to denial or at least severe naivete—that you can't be an honest, aware, reasonably sensitive and intelligent human being and be happy because, God knows, this world is a mess. Well, I suppose it is. I don't know if it's any worse a mess than it was a century ago: certainly it's a different mess, in many regards. But whether the sum total of human unhappiness has ever gone up or down by a measurable amount—that I don't know. I doubt it, somehow.

I don't know how making myself unhappy, or merely short-circuiting this moment of happiness, could possibly contribute to solving the problem. I'm perfectly willing to share suffering, if that needs to be done, but I don't see how being unhappy is going to help, say, starving children in Burkina Faso. Sending money, yes; being miserable, no. There's quite enough natural misery around without my choosing to add to the sum total.

And yet I see all the time people who do, in fact, choose to be unhappy. Of course sometimes you have no choice in the matter: you can't choose to be upbeat and cheerful in the midst of depression or deep anguish or mourning or brokenness, and stress really can just about wipe a person out. But it's interesting that recently, psychology seems to have caught up with C.S. Lewis. Our feelings arise out of our thoughts, we're being told: we form an interpretation of what we pick up from the world around us, and we respond emotionally to that interpretation. If the event itself or our interpretation of it is negative, we'll feel hurt or anger. But maybe the problem isn't what's happened—the external event itself. Maybe the problem is what we've chosen to make of it. And maybe, in that case, our emotional response is simply out to lunch. Not always, of course; but it is a possibility.

And what was it Lewis said about self-made hells... of prisons made with bars of our own imagining, from which we could step free if only we chose? (I know: It's in The Great Divorce. A woman with a memory as bad as mine is has no business lending her books to friends.)

I can't judge anyone else's choices, only my own. It seems obviously God-pleasing and God-honouring to look around the landscape with an eye to whatever good stuff might be lurking around the joint. This means that I have to set down the wrongs and hurts of my life—not by denying or negating them, but by putting them in their proper place: yes, that happened, but damned if I'm going to let it run (and ruin) the rest of my life. Letting it do that would be giving Wrong the victory, and who wants that? And while I'm at it, I'm also going to take responsibility for the dumb choices I made, as well as understanding the dumb choices others made that affected me. I have done enough hell, thank you; and while not all of it was self-chosen, enough was. I think I will take Lewis' advice and step out into a state of mind decidedly less solipsistic and more cheerful. Perhaps this attitude-choice is going to annoy people who'd rather see things more bleakly, but tough toenails.

We can err disastrously in choosing to ignore the very real problems of life: in denying our own woundedness and pain, in refusing to come to terms with the past. But isn't it possible to err in exactly the opposite direction: to ignore the very real glories and graces of life, to deny our own sweet gifts, to turn our back on real love, to abandon the hopeful future? We're so busy looking for what we think we need to be happy, and there happiness is sitting right under our noses, wanting desperately to be picked up and held—if only we would choose to see it.

Probably someone, reading these words, would scold me for failing to give due respect to those in the midst of suffering. All I can say, from extensive travels in De Profundis Land, is that people in the midst of real suffering rapidly find a sense of humour or they curl up and die of sheer boredom, for whatever else real suffering is, it is exceedingly tedious. Only the princess with pea-under-the-mattress-itis can be totally serious about her suffering. The rest of us make bad jokes and get on with it.

I could take my morning bubble of unreasonable happiness and burst it, quite possibly just because wanton destruction can be so much bad fun. Or I could —and in fact did!— treasure it all through the day, holding it very lightly as befits a bubble, admiring its shine and beauty, enjoying this gift for the duration of its existence. Sooner or later, it would go of its own accord, because this kind of unreasonable happiness does not have a long shelf life.

But just for the moment, if God sees fit to award me a batch of happiness, who am I to say "I know better than you, Lord?"

△ Millennium Project News

“Wow!” “The church looks fabulous!” “Beautiful!” “It’s much brighter!” “The statue ‘shines!’”—That’s what we are hearing in the parish. And more!

A Little Bit of History

The last major restoration took place in 1952. Ezra Hammer directed the project. Thomas Brown Sr completed this restoration. Arthur Buehlow was the newly-arrived pastor. The last major redecorating was in 1973. Howard Weicker directed the work. Thomas Brown Jr completed the painting and decoration. Norman Keffer was pastor at the time.

Millennium Project Update

Except for a couple of missing light fixtures due in September, the Millennium Project—restoration, repairs and repainting of the worship space—is substantially completed: plaster repairs have been made throughout, especially to the front walls, west balcony and ceiling beneath the side arches; walls and ceilings have been repainted; decorations and stenciling have been repainted or restored and coated with preservative; the arms and hands of the Christ Statue were restored, and the figure was substantially repainted and re-gilt; the lighting has been repainted and refurbished with new, high efficiency components and white glass; all stained glass windows were cleaned; over 50 pieces of stained glass were replaced and a number of north and west-facing glass panels were completely re-lead; two windows required major reconstruction.

All together, the results speak for themselves: We have a much brighter and beautifully maintained worship space to welcome members and guests alike.

Gratitudes

We are extremely grateful to Ken Bender, Don Coxson, Tim Junker and Dave Buehlow for their expertise & labour; to Howard Weicker, Hollice Stock and Ernie Ritz for their insights into previous restorations and suggestions; to Jill & Ray Merner, Deb & Brian Roth, Bruce Hammer, Ken & Jean Hammer, Manfred Chiduck, Judy Riley, Henry Simon, Flex & Kathy Bender, Shirley Unrau, Lorraine Schroeder, Mildred Cook, Reta Coxson, Paula Povey, Betty Ritz, Jessie Junker, Leona Bingeman and Betty Murray for clean-up and preparation for Sunday worship. Thanks, friends!

Millennium Project Support

Support from Trinity members has been terrific and extremely heartening. However, we still have a way to go. Have you made your family’s financial contribution toward Trinity’s Millennium Project? Every bit helps. Please get your Millennium Fund contributions in as soon as possible and encourage any vacationing family and friends to do the same. Our investment today helps us to keep faith with our forebears, to honour the worshipper and guest of our time and generation, and reflects a commitment to those who will come after us.

Financial Stewardship Update

The General Fund has held up well, especially given the inclusion of $5,559 in GST payments for the Millennium Project. We anticipate about another $10,000 in Millennium Fund costs and an August Capital Fund payment of $7,000 for the new parsonage roof.

🏠 laurie clarke & friends

🏠 New Parsonage Roof

It began when Kim and I were away: it rained in our bedroom. We'd had a leak there a few years ago, but some new roof flashing took care of it. This time, things were not so simple. The roof, which has given many years of service, required new shingles. So, as you may have seen, there's a new roof on the Peel Street house. Tim Junker did the work using 20-year shingles. The payment will be made in August.
