🏠 Pastor André: Grace & Great News

Grace be yours and peace.

Grace

First, the grace... For the last few weeks, Pastor Nadine and I have been laying the foundation for a number of interesting ministries. As the material in the facing column indicates, “grace” will be our theme through Lent, in preaching and in study. I think the Lenten movie series, “Visions of Grace,” will be particularly interesting. Each week, we’ll screen a movie which offers some sort of vision of grace. Do join us for supper, a movie and little conversation.

Great News 1: Cry Out!

There are two bits of great news in the parish. The first has to do with our TYGers. If you check the list on page 7, you’ll see that we’ll be sending over 30 people to Cry Out!, the ELCIC’s year 2002 national youth gathering. Wow! Absolutely unprecedented! This will be our biggest youth adventure ever!

Already, we’re hearing many voices of support. The Trinity Quilters are pledged to make a Father’s Day quilt for fundraising. Millie & Stu Rhem and friends will be working on a Christmas craft sale; Marlene Mueller and friends are pulling together a Palm Sunday bake sale; countless parents and TYGers will be doing hot dog sales at Murray’s and car washes up at the Tim Horton’s plaza among other events. The whole project will be an enormous undertaking. Please support our TYGers as you have opportunity. National youth gatherings offer unparalleled opportunities for terrific fellowship and the creation of life-long relationships.

Great News 2: Millennium Project

The other great news, is that, at the annual meeting, the congregation gave the go-ahead to Trinity’s Millennium Project. The project seeks to renew Trinity’s worship space by making repairs to the plaster, repainting the walls and ceiling, refurbishing the lighting fixtures, and making repairs to the stained glass windows. The work will begin in late May and be completed in August: another big adventure! Please support this project, as you are able, with your tithes and offerings.

Grace and great news, all around!

🏠 Grace-Filled Adult Learning

Who Are the People in My Neighbourhood?

In the series which concludes March 4, we’re getting to meet some “people in our neighbourhood”—people who come from a variety of faith perspectives and who live out their faith in a variety of vocations. We’re meeting a teacher, funeral director, professor of nutrition, doctor, pastor and others. Join us, Sundays, at 10:15 am

Aspects of Grace

In the Sunday morning Lenten series Aspects of Grace, conversation will centre on the Sunday readings and reflections on the sermon. Join us, Sundays, March 11 through April 1, at 10:15 am.

Visions of Grace

During Lent, the pastors and members of the Adult Learning Team will be hosting a series of Tuesday evening meals and movies. The series is called Visions of Grace. In keeping with a measure of Lenten simplicity, people will be invited to “brown-bag” their supper. Beverages will be provided. Each week, we’ll gather at about 6 pm for supper. A short introduction of the evening’s movie will take place when people are settled in and the movie will be screened thereafter. Each film will offer some sort of vision of grace. Some conversation will follow the movie. We expect to be done by 9 pm, at the very latest.

Pastor André will introduce this adult series and the first movie on Tuesday, March 6. Need a ride? Give Don Jardin a call at 662-9810. People will be invited to sign-up in advance so that we can get a sense of numbers.

🏠 Soup, Sandwich, Sermon & Song

We gather for our annual series of Lenten noon-hour devotions every Wednesday, at 12:05 noon, at Zion United Church, beginning February 28. A free-will offering is taken to cover costs. Any additional funds go to the Bible Society. Trinity Lutheran Church will host the March 7 service led by Pastor Nadine. The theme this year will be The “I Am” Sayings of Jesus. Join us for this wonderful and rich ecumenical experience!

🏠 Sunday Church School

It's been another fine month for the Sunday Church School. I can't say enough about the dedication and graciousness of all our teachers. What a great bunch. You do us all proud!

Some of the goings on of the Sunday Church School include the younger Sunday School children working on some songs to sing for Transfiguration Sunday. We are also getting ready for our special Lenten emphasis. Pringle cans are still welcomed. The whole Sunday Church School is also looking forward to the Palm Sunday Parade on April 8, 2001. Mark this date on your calender now.

Something that I am very excited about is "Rekindling the Fire: Implementing Family Based Ministry" with Dick Hardel, of the Augsburg Youth and Family Institute. The day (March 31, 2001) will prove to be filled with excellent information and inspiration. I would encourage anyone with any interest to attend this one-day event. Hopefully we can get a fairly large Trinity contingent. Faith formation starts at home, let's find out how we can encourage our families.

Deuteronomy 6: 5, 7 ~ "You shall love the Lord with all your heart, and with all your soul and with all your might. ... Recite these commandments to your children and talk about them when you are at home and when you go away, when you lie down and when you rise."

🏠 Sabbath Blessings

Writing from Prescott, Ontario, Molly Wolf offers another SABBATH BLESSING. Her first series was published under the title HIDING IN PLAIN SIGHT: SABBATH BLESSINGS (Liturgical Press). Her second series, is called A PLACE LIKE ANY OTHER: SABBATH BLESSINGS (Image/Doubleday). SABBATH BLESSINGS are published weekly to the Internet community. Each month, we download and reprint one essay. © Molly Wolf.

Compost

The white plastic bucket by the sink was more than full; it was piled high and deep. One more eggshell or bit of potato peel might start a sludge-slide that could potentially swamp the entire counter-top. So taking the compost out had become imperative. No use waiting for the next incoming person with boots on.... I sighed, and reached for my own boots and my parka and took the bucket out back, to where the compost bin sits squatly behind the garage.

Taking compost out in mid-winter is not my idea of a good time. Nineteen times out of twenty, those responsible for snow removal chez nous have not thought to clear a path from the back door to the bin, and we have had one heck of a lot of snow lately. Worse still, there's a biggish step down from the concrete pad between the house and garage to the back lawn, and with this much snow down, I couldn't see where it was: I might set a booted foot down expecting solidity and find myself up to my knee in snow, and then go tumbling head over teakettle. I am no longer young, and I have my dignity to consider. In addition, there was a good half-foot of snow to be removed from the top of the bin before I could pry the flap open. And finally, and worst, the last people to take out the compost had piled the last few loads right beneath the opening instead of pushing the stuff to the back, and now the whole mass was frozen solid, leaving no space for the load I was carrying.

So I stood there in the snow and took handfuls of potato peels and lettuce stems and too-far-gone apples from the bucket and tossed them behind the miniature Alp of leftover frozen corn and lemon rinds below the flap. It was very cold, and the compost-stuff was wet and slightly slimy, especially as I got toward the bottom of the bucket, which was frankly revolting. Fortunately I have a strong stomach. I have changed diapers, wiped up cat barf, washed under stoves and refrigerators, gutted fish and (once) a chicken, prepared chopped beef kidney suet from the fresh warm stuff (you don't want to know), even read Ayn Rand—well, a page or two, anyway. Not much gets to me. Which is a good thing, because as I slowly emptied the bucket, it gave me a moment to reflect on why an onion succumbing to bacterial soft rot doesn't particularly bother me. The reason: I see the schloop as carbon in process—a process that the compost bin is full of, or will be as soon as the weather warms up again (assuming the pile is frozen right through, which it might not be). And carbon-in-process is fascinating stuff. True, it's not as pretty as a supermarket pile of fresh, crisp broccoli. But that "truth is beauty, beauty is truth" guff is, and always has been, a lie, as anyone knows who follows the tabloid stories on super-models.

A long time ago, I wrote something on how carbon-in-process connects us all, from rhizopus mold to emperor penguin; and I still like taking out that bit of information and turning it around in my head, like turning a pretty stone over in the palm of my hand. Today, though, what struck me about carbon-in-process is its wild and natural generosity. This stuff all came free.

Of course I have to pay for my food; but that's really paying for the time and effort of the people who grew it; the costs they incurred to bring it to harvest and market it; its subsequent transport and processing; supermarket overhead; that sort of thing. Perfectly reasonable—in fact, better than reasonable. I pay a far lower percentage of my income for food than do the vast majority of people in this world. But the atoms that make up my too substantial body—the carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, calcium, iron, magnesium, and all the others, not even omitting selenium—all these are the reckless gift of Creation. And of Creation's Creator, unless you believe that this all came about purely by accident.

We were given this world for free—which is probably why we treat it so damned badly. Popular wisdom says that the best way of ensuring that a puppy or kitten will be ill-cared-for is to give it away to strangers. We don't seem to value what we haven't had to pay for. And the more we've paid, the more we value the thing—even when it has no real intrinsic use or value, like Marilyn Monroe's spike-heeled pumps. On the other hand, when we're freely given something as essential, as invaluable, as necessary to our existence as this biosphere, we treat it like an orange to be squeezed dry and tossed away. Go figure.

But matter, properly considered, is marvellous stuff. This goop on my fingertips and, for that matter, the fingertips themselves—these are composed of atoms forged deep in the crucibles of stars. Next to this, spinning straw into gold is a cinch. This carbon-in-process, like the oxygen-and-water-in-process in and around me, was formed billions of years ago from smaller atoms, glued together at temperatures and pressures that are simply unimaginable. These atoms were spit out by stars flaring out of existence. However many gazillion years later, their dust spun down into the hard, living, beautiful Earth-ball under my feet; the ball I come from and shall inevitably return to; the ball that is the source and end of all this compost.

These tiny remnants of power and grandeur now carry my immortal soul around in a dance of power and mystery that I will never, this side of the River, really understand. And still some people think that Genesis 1 is more poetic, more spiritually glorious, more God-true than cosmology... God glories in Creation—look at the end of the Book of Job!—for good reasons: it is indeed glorious. I don't know why we have such a hard time seeing that.

Why doesn't God's sheer, prodigal, feckless generosity knock us off our workaday keisters? It's not just all these atoms and molecules, polymers and macromolecules; not all these stars and galaxies and the sweep of space. It's the existence of love: the greatest gift we have been given. We are loved, and so we can love, and that is a mystery next to which the Problem of Evil fades into nonexistence.

We have done nothing whatsoever to earn any of this. It's all far beyond our deserving. We're given life itself, freebies; we're given the stuff of which our bodies are composed; we are given this lovely planet; we are given God's grace unaided by our own efforts. And yet we scheme and scabble, yearn and battle, over so much lesser stuff, because we somehow manage to miss the point. It's so sad, so futile. God is good. That's all that matters.

I knocked the last goopy bits of rotting onion skin into the bin, scrubbed the bucket out with a handful of snow, tossed the snow into the bin, and shut the flap. Then I stood looking out over the back yard for a long moment, down to where the creek still burbles under the ice. Here, the field mice are snuggled under snow, the trees are silently, slowly respiring, and the long grass is waiting for warmer days.

Next time I come out, I'll bring a bit of one-by-four with me and knock the frozen stuff toward the back of the compost bin, so there's more room. In the meantime, time to wash the dishes.

△ Priscilla Ministry

The response has been terrific, though the need is ongoing. The Priscillas continue to collect a large variety of items for the Grand Valley Institution for Women. Label any material "Grand Valley" and bring it to the church office. Need information? Simply contact Joyce Roth at 662-1717.

A lovely thank-you note from the women of Grand Valley was received shortly after Christmas. It has been placed in the Katie Luther Room Thank-You Book.

△ Millennium Project

The following information, presented at the annual meeting of Trinity Lutheran Church, February 4, is gleaned from the Year 2000 Bulletin of ANNUAL REPORTS:

Millennium Project Costs

Remove lighting and hang temporary lights	$ 1,500
Repair plaster and repaint main church interior	48,950
Repair and rework lighting	21,938
Re-hang lighting & install manual lighting winch	5,000
Repair stained glass windows	3,820
Miscellaneous items, contingency	5,740

Total Millennium Project costs	$ 86,948

While people committed $15,150 to the Millennium Project in 2000, we actually raised almost double that: $29,108.

Year 2001 commitments stand at $19,150. We are optimistic that we will raise much more, this year, as well. Any shortfall will be covered by bank financing.

Work is scheduled to begin around May 28 for completion in August. The whole endeavour is a major undertaking involving a number of highly-skilled craftspeople. The people who are working on our lighting built our original fixtures over 50 years ago. The people doing the painting and plastering represent the continuation of the firm which has been painting our worship space for generations.

Please keep this project, together with all of Trinity varied ministries and financial needs, before you in the year to come.

🏠 Tintinnabulations

March 2 ~ World Day of Prayer Service

The World Day of Prayer Service will be hosted by Trinity on Friday, March 2, at 7 pm. The theme is "Informed Prayer, Prayerful Action." The material was written by the women of Samoa. The World Day of Prayer offers us the opportunity to reflect upon and affirm our faith in Jesus Christ, to share in the community of Christians around the world, and to commit to working for social justice. All men and women welcome. Pastor Nadine will give the message.

March 3 ~ Marriage Preparation

Interfaith is holding a Saturday Marriage Preparation workshop from 8:30 am to 4:30 pm All Trinity couples who anticipate marriage participate in one or other marriage prep course. Interested? Call the Interfaith office at 662-3092.

March 5 ~ ELW Meeting

The ELW will gather, 2 pm, to focus on the work of and membership in the Seminary Women's Auxiliary. For details, give Shirley Unrau, 662-1515, a call. The ELW has great fellowship and does great work. All women are invited!

March 7 ~ Sacred Circle

Sacred Circle participants will gather at the home of Kathy Bender at 7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 7. All women interested in conversation and fellowship are welcome. Each person is invited to share an Angel Story. This may be a biblical story, a story that was read in a book, or an experienced story. Adding another dimension to the evening will be the crafting of a wire & bead angel. For information, call convener Barb Schwartzentruber, at 662-4481.

March 13/14 ~ Trinity Crafters

The March wind doth blow...bringing with it Wind Chimes as the project for March. Crafters will have a choice: Buzzy Bee or Laughing Lady Bug wind chimes. These will be fashioned from clay pots and Patio paints. The date is Tuesday, March 13 and/or Wednesday, March 14, beginning at 7 p.m. in Trinity Hall. Watch the Narthex for samples, supply lists, and sign-up sheet. Call Millie Rhem, 662-2727, for information.

Financial Stewardship Update

It's probably no surprise to anyone who's paid their heating bill, this winter, but the parish utilities costs have gone through the roof. That's the case even though we are extremely careful about how we heat the various zones in the building! So we have a large negative balance in the General Fund to begin the year. Please, keep our needs in mind as you plan your family's financial stewardship.

🏠 TYGer Tales

National Youth Gathering: Cry Out!

The next biennial national youth gathering will be held at Vancouver, BC, August 15-18, 2002. The event, Cry Out!, will take place at the University of British Columbia.

With Pastor Nadine leading, Matt Aho, Mary Aitken, Travis Bondy, Jason Brodrecht, Brandon Danner, Justin Danner, Brandy Hillar, Melanie Jahn, Rebecca Jones, Chantelle Junker, Jayla Kirkey, John Lavergne, Natasha Lindner, Ricky Long, Erin Martin, Stephanie May, Laura McCurdy, Dan Mueller, Sarah Mueller, Ali Pearson, Dan Ritz, Jake Ritz, Alyssa Roth, Steven Sangster, Cara Scheerer, Janelle Scheerer, Brittany Snider, Joe Trafford, Zack Whittaker and Courtney Winhold are planning to participate. As well, Ashley Mueller and Ruth Lavergne are inquiring as to the possibility of leadership opportunities.

We've organized a schedule of TYGers activities through to the fall, including several fund-raisers for Cry Out! All families are committed to assisting with our fund-raising endeavours and the TYGers are grateful for all congregational support. We are especially thankful to the Trinity Quilters who will be crafting a father's day quilt to help raise funds. As well, the Endowment Fund has earmarked $2,000 in 2001 and we anticipate another $2,000 in 2002 to support our TYGers in their Vancouver journey.

Is there any way in which you can help our TYGers to attend Cry Out!, next year, in Vancouver? Every bit of moral and financial support helps! Please do your part as you are able!

March 2 ~ Swimming at Linsemans'

We'll gather at Trinity, 6:40 pm to car-pool our way to Linseman's for 7 pm. Tom/Debbie Linseman, Rick/Jane Trafford, Steven Sangster & Joe Trafford are taking lead.

March 13 ~ March Break Early Movie Show

We'll gather at the church at a time to be arranged later to get to an early, inexpensive Tuesday movie show in Kitchener. Kim/André Lavergne, Deb/Brian Roth, Alyssa Roth and John Lavergne are taking lead for this event.
