+ Pastor André ~ A New Day

Grace and peace to you.

On Sunday morning, I completed my 26th year at Trinity Church. I hadn't noticed, at the time, and the day unfolded like any other: worship, adult learning... I think it was Tuesday before it dawned on me. We moved into Peel Street in a blizzard with the first moving van going off the road outside New Dundee. We didn't own much at the time and the house seemed cavernous. Seems like only yesterday. Then again...

This morning —we're now a few days into March— Lori Arnott stopped in to sign an application to Waterloo Seminary for a parish intern. This person would join our leadership team in September. The prospects look terrific! Last week, Helen Toman began her visitation in our parish. Marvelous! It won't be long and Bob Thaler will be back to a regular rhythm of monthly preaching as well. Wonderful! (Bob & Anne Thaler are in China, right now, having traversed Thailand and Cambodia on their way from India.)

For my part, my world has been unfolding in exciting new ways. I have —as my boss has described it— jumped into my new national role with both feet. The learning curve has been pretty steep. But the work is enlivening.

From home, the word is out: Ruth is getting married. She and Ian Zwiers make a lovely couple. Their future is bright and will likely take them to Vancouver's UBC for the next leg of their adventure. It will be an honour to welcome Ian into our family although I think he already feels pretty much at home here.

In the parish, Anne has started her new first-Wednesday-of-the-month Open Table program —Have you seen the circle of chairs in the Katie Luther Room? Christina Flood has begun her Motivated Mommies drop-in. Dee Radke has pulled together an Anniversary Cook Book project —Go ahead, fill in a form! And the Anniversary Team is assembling elements for Ernie Ritz's forthcoming history of the congregation —Have you made a contribution?

Amidst all this, we're putting in place a regimen of liturgies and prayer for Holy Week and the Great Three Days. It's almost a little hard to believe it's still Lent. It feels so much more like Easter, a new day!

All blessings.

+ ELW's Baby Bundles

Our ELW is working on CLWR Baby Bundles. They get sent out in the Spring. We need knitted or crocheted baby sweaters, sleepers, shirts, wash-cloths, and baby wool for our knitters. We use any donations to purchase flannel for diapers and receiving blankets; diaper pins; baby wool, and other supplies. Please put any articles in the narthex. Financial donations should be labeled "Baby Bundles". Imagine the joy of a needy mother who receives a CLWR bundle to welcome her newborn!

+ Anniversary Recipe Book

Friends, the Anniversary Task Group is preparing an Anniversary Cookbook as part of our anniversary celebrations! It is highly appropriate, timely, and even necessary to preserve the recipes that are one of the important foundations of Trinity Lutheran Church!

Everyone is welcome to submit a recipe or two or three. Please submit your recipes only on the enclosed recipe sheet including only ONE recipe per sheet. If a recipe is continued on the back, please mark "OVER" in large lettering at the bottom of the first page. Devotional items (prayers, brief reflections, etc.) will also be considered for inclusion. Items borrowed from a published source should be accompanied by publication information so that proper credit may be given.

Please deposit your completed recipe sheets in the hanging file in the narthex at the back of the church. Additional blank recipe sheets are available there too. The price of our cookbook will be about $10. Books will be published in time for Christmas giving.

We're still deciding on our submission deadline as we want to have as many people as possible participating, but please submit your recipes as soon as possible. Questions? Contact Dee Radke (519) 662-1519.

+ Sabbath Blessings

We are grateful to Molly Wolff for her kindness in making the gentle voice of Sabbath Blessings available to us.

Deserts

It snowed a little last night, only an inch or so, but enough to refresh the snowbanks and turn them dazzling white under a blazing high-winter sky. I should be sick of snow by now — we've had a lot of it, this winter — but oddly, I'm not.

I got a break from winter when I went to northwestern Arizona to deal with my late sister's house. I spent a full week in real desert. It was odd going out in sneakers and a sweatshirt in mid-February, odder still to see kids wearing flipflops instead of heavy boots.

It was odd being in desert — real desert. I'd never done that before.

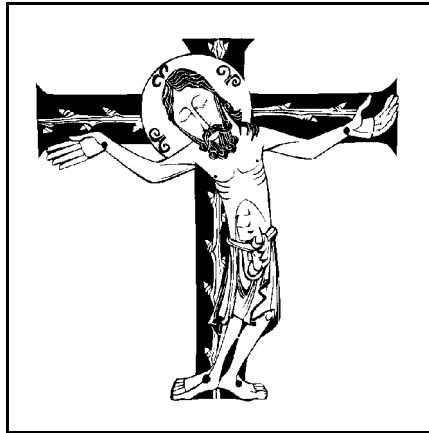

Except for 12 years in the Midwest, three of which I was too young to remember, I have spent my entire life in the northeastern quadrant of North America, most of that in southeastern Ontario. I am utterly familiar and comfortable with the sort of waste spaces that this part of the world contains, mostly scrub timber. I have stood at the edge of the Real North, Sudbury, knowing that it's an 18-hour drive to the Manitoba border, and except for a few towns, most of that's just woods and the occasional moose.

I know in my head that north is just as potentially dangerous as desert, especially in summer, when the mosquitos and blackflies can eat you alive. I know in my head that winter is just as dangerous as desert. I'd experienced that on my way to Arizona, running into lake effect snow on my way down to the airport at Syracuse. For those of you who don't know lake effect snow; it's like walking into a wall of white where the road disappears completely, while the big transports roar past you undeterred and terrifying. It's scary.

It's just that northern dangers are the ones I'm familiar with. They are comfortable dangers. I know how to handle them. (Get off the road and wait the snow out somewhere warm.) The desert struck me as dangerous and utterly foreign. The mountains, while beautiful, were barren and looked as though they scraped the sky raw. I'd never been in a place where you parked anywhere in the front yard because it was all gravel and sand. I felt as though I'd been dropped into a lunar barrenness, and it was very odd. Odd and disquieting, although I could see its beauty.

I tried to think, during my time in that landscape, that this is what the Bible really speaks about. The words we rely on come from a culture firmly rooted in a landscape like this one, where finding green pastures — such an ordinary part of my landscape — is indeed almost miraculous.

Jesus would have walked in a landscape that looked far more like this one than like my landscape of woods and snow and water. "Living water" means more here, where water is life itself, than it does in my landscape of rivers and great lakes, where fresh water is in careless abundance.

We bring to Scripture whatever knowledge we have, and sometimes that's close to the experience that Scripture narrates and sometimes it isn't. There's a lot in Scripture that I didn't get until I got hands-on with a month-old Shetland lamb and experienced that quivering, half-fearful, half-trusting, liveliness and curiosity. I don't think I got "make straight in the desert a highway for our God" until I saw Arizona.

But I also bring Scripture into my own landscape. Jean de Brébeuf, early 17th-century missionary to the Huron people, wrote tenderly of the newborn Jesus, wrapped in ragged rabbit skins and laid in a lodge of broken bark. (See Evangelical Lutheran Worship, hymn 284, 'Twas in the Moon of Wintertime.) "Make straight in the desert" might, in my landscape, mean making a way through the toughly beautiful Canadian Shield, or through beaver-dam swamps and scrub timber, swatting away the blackflies.

Or it might mean making a way through the tough thickets of a spirit bruised almost to extinction, because there are deserts in the heart. I know; I've spent time there too.

It shocked me to hear plans to build tens of thousands of homes in the Arizona desert; what on earth would that do to the aquifer? Odd that someone who lives a stone's throw from a river churning in spate worries about water, when the desert locals simply assume that enough will be there. We'll see who's right. It was good to get back to snow. It's a nuisance sometimes, but I'd miss it.

+ Property Matters

Energy Conservation & Comfort

Our energy conservation and comfort program is well under way. So far... The parsonage attics have been insulated. The Peel Street water heater and Wilmot Street windows have been replaced. Low-flush toilet installation is completed at Wilmot and pending at Peel. The Wilmot Street water softener has been relocated and the cistern demolished. A new furnace will be installed shortly and the walls insulated thereafter. This work will attract energy-related rebates and will be covered by 2009 Capital receipts.

Other Work

We have invited Randy Hannigan of Victorian Art Glass to examine the nave windows. Randy, who did our Millennium Project restoration, has completed a detailed inspection of our stained glass and expects to propose a fairly modest schedule of repairs. A new water softener has been installed at Peel Street! A new hot water tank and double sink are destined for the Katie Luther Room. Finally, a new holding tank & pump have been installed in the church kitchen. We pray: no more bad smells!
