🏠 Pastor André: Celebrating Mentors

Grace be yours and peace.

For the last few days, I have been talking to a number of people about the possibility of their becoming mentors in Trinity's Affirmation! Ministry program. Every year, at this time, we match an adult member of the parish with each youth who is completing grade 6 and who will be moving into grade 7 in the fall. The mentor will journey with that youth through to the spring of their grade 9 year. To date, over 50 youth have been matched with mentors. Another 9 will begin their partnership this spring.

In recent weeks, Pastor Nadine has been refining Trinity's mentoring program. Ever since Pastor Judi began matching mentors with youth in a concerted way –The Gold Team is our fourth such major mentoring group!– we have been making course corrections as we've gone along. For example, Pastor Nadine has introduced helpful "Share sheets" to assist Gold Team mentors and youth to engage in conversation and to build their relationship. The emphasis, however, remains the same: to help establish a caring relationship between an active adult member of the parish and a youth who may be seeking Confirmation at length.

So far, the experience of youth and mentors has been overwhelmingly positive. People were deeply moved at last year's Confirmation service when mentors came forward to support their youth in their profession of faith – a lovely Pastor Judi touch!

Of course, not every relationship will set roots as deep or will prove as lasting. After all, we—mentors and pastors!– are still learning, trying new things, and making those "course corrections" mentioned above. Our hope, though, is that when Trinity's youth need support, advice or simply someone to talk to, in later years, their mentors will prove to be people to whom they may turn with confidence.

On the last Sunday of the Easter Season –on the Feast of Pentecost– nine mentors and nine youth will take up their journey together. Please join us in supporting them! And please join us in applauding the Gold Team mentors who are taking up the cause of –and growing with!– those who are yet young in their faith.

Easter blessings!

🏠 Millennium Project Update

Millennium Project Under Way

Millennium Project work began in our worship space just after Easter with repairs to our stained glass. Week-to-week, glass pieces and panels have been removed and re-worked or replaced as necessary. We expect this phase to be substantially completed as we move into June. The most significant issue, right now, is locating closely matching glass

Beginning May 28, our light fixtures will be removed to Hamilton where they will be refurbished with new, efficient components by the same company –and one of the same men!– who designed and built them half-a-century ago. The lights will then be rehung as the plastering and painting unfolds. The repairs to the plaster and re-painting will begin on June 25. Everything should be completed by August 24.

Millennium Fund Growing

Thanks to a $1,500 contribution from the Trinity Quilters and to many timely donations, the Millennium Fund now stands at over $41,500 (May 6). We are almost half-way to our estimated project cost of $84,000. Well done!

Last year, many people committed themselves to a contribution this spring or summer. We would welcome these funds any time now, as we will begin to make expenditures toward the glass work and lighting this month (May).

Every four years, we do a new parish photo album. Births and deaths, new members and people moving on, children growing up and a new pastor on the scene—all have served to change the complexion of our community. Our last album was completed in the fall of 1997 and is significantly out-of-date. Early in May, a small team of people interviewed representatives from two different companies and settled on Lifetouch Church Directories to do our new album. They have done work for us twice before. Council member Buck Roth, a veteran of several directory projects, will oversee the new venture. Full details will be carried in the next issue of TRINITY DOVE.

🏠 Discipleship ~ Adults

Bishop Huras: Waterloo Declaration

Our adult learning sessions conclude for this "school year" with the visit, in the parish, on May 27, of Bishop William Huras, retired bishop of the Eastern Synod.

Bishop Huras will be preaching –This is a baptismal Sunday with five baptisms!– and teaching and will address the Waterloo Declaration, the document which affirms "full communion" among Anglicans and Lutherans, and which will come before the ELCIC National Convention (and the General Synod of the Anglican Church of Canada) this summer. The Waterloo Declaration is available on-line. Go to the links section of Trinity's website at <www.telc.ca>.

The Market

It's the only part of the city that I feel any real affection for, and the affection goes all the way back to the first time I set foot there—can it really be thirty years ago? I guess it will be, come August. Nobody has to give it its formal name; say "the Market," and everyone will know what you're talking about, and just about everybody will smile. It's like that.

Once, long ago, it was a poor tough sort of place, an area of seedy taverns full of the smell of spilled beer, old smoke, and (sometimes) stale urine. It's still haunted by beggars and drunks—rubbies, they're called here. When I worked in the Market years ago, tending the cash at the venerable and aromatic fishmarket, one of the fishmongerly rites of passage was learning how to escort a rubbie gently but decisively out of the store. We had nothing personal against the rubbies, and we always treated them gently. They were, on the whole, more polite and easier to get on with than many of our customers, and we liked them better. But they were visiting our shop in search of free provender, and that meant they had to go. In a fish store, the few things that a person can hoist and eat raw in an alley tend to be pretty expensive.

I remember something else about the Market in those days. Many of the shop-owners were East European Jews. Some had got to Canada before the war, but others had survived the unimaginable. They were tough and could be abrasive, but they had a warm, rough, kindness—the kindness of people who have suffered. I clung to that unspoken kindness when I needed it—and I did back then—like a sick baby without anyone's acknowledging what was going on. They mixed comfortably with the tough, cheerful Ontario French who ran the vegetable stalls, bringing in produce from the eastern valley flatlands, and with the newest immigrants: Southeast Asians, West Indians and Filipinos who were, back then, starting to give the white-bread city the benefit of colour.

But that was more years ago than I want to think about. For at least the last 20 years, the Market has been trendy, a tourist attraction. It's full of upscale shops now, the heart of the restaurant scene, the place you go for genuine French bread and Belgian patisserie and the best cookware. Right now, I see, they're digging up the old main drag of the place, the one bit left of the old place: instead of a grotty street with narrow crowded sidewalks, the core of the Market is going to have broad walkways, paved in patterned rosy brick, very handsome. And the old sewers and water mains really did need replacing....

Still, change as it may—for worse or for better is a matter of personal opinion—one thing remains true of the Market: it puts you into a particular frame of mind. It's not a place to hurry in. Even the drivers, usually so impatient, give up and admit that the Market is pedestrian turf. Nobody's in a hurry in the Market. If you're into shopping, you can dally over the crafts and the Hungarian sausages and rummage for the freshest eggplant. If you're young, you can revel in the Market's in-yer-face anarchic romanticism—for it is quite a romantic place. If you like architecture, you can go googoo-eyed over the handsome old limestone buildings, the touches of the picturesque. If you're trendy or a gourmand, the place is packed with comestibles.

But if you're like me, wanting only to live in a moment stripped free of past and future, you can drift from shop to shop, with the excuse of a list of things to get, but really bobbing in the moment like a duck in still water. I think this is what the Market's real appeal is, what keeps its sidewalks packed on a bright Saturday afternoon. People aren't really here to shop—that's just the excuse they can make to themselves and their neighbours. They're here because in the Market, it's unusually possible to live purely in the moment, without intention or desire, setting down whatever cross you're bearing: being one small animate bit of Creation looking around at the rest of the joint, at peace.

This, I have found, can be an intentional process, not an accidental glory. There are techniques in contemplation, ways a person can learn, of pushing the past and present to one side, of stilling the mind and emptying the soul, readying the self to receive God. My Market-mood is only a variant on a much older and holier process. I can quiet my soul within me and open myself to the colour of the place, to the small things and trivial events, and find a richness there and a sort of peace. The only difference from contemplation is that I'm trying to be open to the Creator by being open to Creation—honoring God by honoring the world God made and saw as good.

C.S. Lewis got it right: God wants us to live in the present, not the past or the future, because this present moment is as close as we're ever going to get in this life to what Eternity is like. The Market, the geese, the river flooding, two kids intent on their sandbox play, a cat sleeping with her tail over her nose and her paws neatly bundled, two blanketed horses standing side-by-side in a field, an old woman dozing on the bus, two young lovers swinging hands and giggling, a drift of leaves, a tangle of flowering maple: we are given such an endless number of God's creations to take loving notice of; and taking loving notice leaves us with such happiness and peace. What on earth keeps us from spending more time at this business of loving notice, when it costs absolutely nothing and gives us so much?

I came away from the Market with a butter dish, a tea cosy, four real dill pickles, some amazing Hungarian sausage, and a very small dish of excellent chocolate gelato; but that really had nothing to do with why I went there, although I can't buy real dills anywhere else.

I also came away after a couple of hours of out-directed contemplation, with the hard, twisted kinks spun out of my soul and my deep tiredness draining away like old brake fluid, and with the hope that perhaps life really won't go on the way it has of late.

I came away knowing that whatever happened in the past, whatever befalls in the future, I have this moment, and God is strongly in it: the gold of new honey, the sweetness of fresh water.

Sunday School: Pentecost is Coming!

Mark June 3 on your calendars and come to Trinity Hall, for the Pentecost Party festivities. We will find out all about the wind and the Spirit. Maybe we will even have some goodies! Also, we will all get to see what toys we are sending to the Toy Lending Library. These toys are a result of the excellent fund-raising we did through our Lenten offerings. This event is for the entire Sunday Church School and we hope to see everyone there.

Sunday School Staff Recognition

On another "eventful" note: Teachers, helpers and all support staff, please mark Friday June 22 on your calendars. This is the day of the staff recognition party. It will be held at Carol and Rob Murray's home, 7:30 pm, and we ask that you RSVP to Claire Otterbein by June 17. Watch for your invitation with all the details.

Seasons of the Spirit

Our curriculum for next September has been ordered. This will be the last year for WHOLE PEOPLE OF GOD as the series is being replaced by SEASONS OF THE SPIRIT for the 2002-03 year. It looks great! It is following the same basic method as WPOG but is refined a good deal. I've read some of the drafts and I am very impressed. But that's a little too far down the road to think about yet! So, for now, enjoy the Pentecost and Staff Recognition parties and rejoice in God's grace.

Affirmation! Mentors and Youth

Below are the current focuses for our terrific Red, Blue and new Gold mentoring teams.

Red Team - Making Disciples 7: Saints & Gifts (May/June)

Blue Team - Confirmation Trinity Sunday, June 10

Gold Team - The first Support session for new mentors takes place on Wednesday, May 23. A week later, on May 30, mentors gather with their youth and families for a supper and a round of introductions. On June 3, mentors and youth make their commitment to the journey at the 9 am Pentecost service.

Affirmation! Camp

Affirmation! Camp is approaching for 2001. The dates are Sunday August 19 to Friday August 24. All youth entering grades 7 and 8 attend. (This means you get to go if you are in grade 6 or 7 now!) By now everyone should have received their introductory letter and registration material. Please, please, pretty please... get them back to me by June 3. We will definitely have a great time this summer. If anyone has any questions about Affirmation! Camp please give me a call (662-1810) or drop me a note <nicholds@telc.ca>.

The Millennium Fund is approaching the half-way mark (see page 2). We need about $84,000 for the project. The first Millennium Project expenditures will be made over the next few weeks. The major emphases, right now, have to do with keeping our General Fund current while continuing to build our Millennium Fund.
